Deron “Doctor D” Reynolds has spent a lifetime playing the piano. Born in Olympia, Washington, he was classically trained for years before joining a blues band in college.

His career really took off when he moved to Osaka, Japan, joining several bands and eventually getting the chance to work for the music label Giza, Music in Osaka, Japan. He spent several years working hard at songwriting, producing and all around “gaijin” entertainment guy for the label. He got songwriting credits with artists such as Aiuchi Rina and Ohno Aika.

Now he has a huge library of works from on stage to on television, and he continues to play and sing his unique arrangements to crowds everywhere. He is an accomplished teacher especially with young children and enjoys teaching music to people of all ages.

He is “the piano man” of Osaka, always looking to please the crowd with a request and constantly learning to play more. But if pressed to answer what his favorite style of music is, it will always and forever be the blues.
